Winner of the Ida Lee Willis Award

Ida Lee Willis Memorial Foundation Preservation Awards recognize those who have demonstrated an understanding of and an appreciation for the value of preserving and reusing Kentucky's historic and prehistoric resources, whether through the restoration of an important building, structure or community resource or through a lifetime commitment to encouraging and promoting historic preservation.

The foundation was chartered in 1979 to honor Ida Lee Willis, the first executive director of the Kentucky Heritage Commission (now the Kentucky Heritage Council) and widow of former Governor Simeon Willis. It was during Mrs. Willis' tenure that Kentucky's successful statewide historic preservation program was initiated.
