HEATHER BINGLEY

Heather Bingley loves working for Volunteers of America serving veterans in West Virginia, but of the many things she enjoys about her calling to help veterans, one is clearly her favorite.

“I love seeing the client get their new set of keys. Even though we’ve been discussing it and working toward it, that’s the moment where you know their lives are going to change,” Heather said. Heather is the Program Manager for VOA Supportive Services for Veteran Families Office in Beckley, West Virginia. She just celebrated her eighth year of serving veterans participating in the VOA Honor program, which provides comprehensive services to veterans in need with a focus on finding affordable, stable housing.

MARCUS STUBBS

Like so many others, Marcus Stubbs and his family found VOA when they needed help the most.

Twelve years ago, Marcus was living in Unity House where VOA provided housing and comprehensive support that gave his family security, stability and a path toward a bright and promising future. Today, Marcus is a member of VOA’s Board of Directors, an emerging leader in the Louisville community and a recent Louisville Business First 40 under 40 honoree. He is also completing his Doctorate degree in Education and Social Change at Bellarmine University.

“I’m honored to serve on the Board because it’s another way to give back my time and treasure because of all that VOA has done for me and my family,” Marcus said.

STEVE GAULT

Steve Gault has built a successful career not only as one of the leading real estate developers and brokers in Louisville, but as a generous philanthropist who gives of his time and talent to strengthen our community. One of Steve’s key partners has been Volunteers of America, where he has led as a donor, advisor and also as an advocate for individuals and families in recovery. He recently presented a wonderfully generous – and surprise -- gift to VOA.

“The many effective, well-administered human service programs of VOA are notably impactful in both urban and rural areas. The organization delivers vital assistance to individuals with critical needs while doing so in a financially responsible manner. CEO Jennifer Hancock and her entire team have earned my continuing, enthusiastic support. I like the committed leadership so it’s easy to feel good about supporting VOA. I was just so happy to be able to surprise them with this gift.” Steve said.
